PATHWAY TO EXCELLENCE

Airway Dysfunction and Sleep Disordered Breathing Course in Dental Sleep Medicine

Friday, May 1 & Saturday, May 2, 2020 | 8:00 am to 5:00 pm

Airway Dysfunction and Sleep Disordered Breathing Course

Airway management has become an important part of general dentistry as many treatment modalities; oral appliance therapy, orthodontics, frenum releases, and myofunctional therapy all enjoy great success. This course will also reveal the non-anatomic contributions that are linked to sleep apnea; including stroke, alzheimer's, heart attack, hypertension, high blood pressure, GERD, excessive daytime sleepiness, diabetes, and dementia. The average dental practice sees over 400 patients with a high risk of suffering from life-threatening sleep apnea, and dentists are often the first line of defense in screening and treating these patients. After this two-day course, you will be ready to treat these patients with confidence, come Monday morning.

“By providing relevant education, clinical experience, and administrative templates, our goal is to prepare you to work with our medical colleagues to treat , and in some cases prevent,obstructive sleep apnea and manage its impact on our healthcare system and society.” -Dr. Steve Lamberg
